The workshop is open to all K12 teachers.

The workshop fee is $95.

Participants have the option of signing up for 2 graduate-level credits of SPAN 6900 for an additional $50.

Isabel Dulfano, PhD (Professor of Spanish, University of Utah) will teach the first two days, and focus on literary analysis of essays, in various contemporary and classical forms.

Maria Luisa Spicer-Escalante, PhD (Professor of Spanish and Linguistics, Utah State University) will teach July 29-30 on Lesson Planning: Moving from a Teacher-Centered to Learner-Centered Classroom.

The workshop may take place remotely, still allowing collaboration and oral communication among all participants.
